

About Megan Yip

In my practice, I have devoted my career to assisting individuals like you to face tough times and to plan for the potential challenges of the future.

I went to law school to help people navigate the systems that govern our lives, and my work with the Borchard Foundation Center on Law & Aging, Legal Aid of Marin, and as an Advisory Board Member of the Sacred Dying Foundation have guided me to develop a practice that addresses the real needs of people facing hard questions.

When it comes to estate planning, the fact that I also practice post-death administration means I know exactly how to protect you from potential complications down the road. When it comes to post-death administration, I am able to not only walk you through your current challenges but serve as an ongoing guide to things are in order.

During my years working at Twitter, I developed the company's critical best practices on post death digital assets and established myself as a legal expert in the space. This means that I offer a critical additional expertise to all my work with estate planning and post-death administration.

Finally, I am committed to educating on the important issues in the space. Through my writing and speaking, I help estate planning attorneys, tech companies, individuals and organizations address how to better plan for difficult situations presented by incapacity and death. In a world with an ever-changing tech landscape, I provide tools and resources to help you determine what to do with digital assets.
